Hunting and Poaching in Altai Sayan Region:

Anthropologists as “Experts” for International Organisations

Abstract:

In 2008, together with my colleague Brian Donahoe, I conducted research and wrote up the results of the WWF-comissioned project on the "Local perspectives on hunting and poaching in the Altai-Sayan ecoregion". In this presentation I discuss the results of this project, which challenged the WWF initial assumptions about illegal hunting as primarily-economically driven. Subsequently, I reflect on the conditions under which anthropological understandings of "local ways of life" can be transformed into applicable recommendations for policy making and/or NGO involvement.
